Shining Lights

The Path of the just is as the shining, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. Prov. 4:18

In a sermon at the White Memorial Church is Los Angeles, Elder Lloyd Wyman told the following story.

In a certain farming area in Canada a couple went for a walk through the wheat fields. There their little son went with them. Each parent thought the other was holding the boy's hand. Suddenly they realized that the boy was missing. They searched frantically but could not find him. Finally the husband went to town for help. The townspeople quickly rallied, and the search continued, but with no success. The weather was cold. All night the search continued. At daybreak some suggested that they all join hands and sweep through the field. Eventually the child was found dead. Someone said, "If only we had joined hands sooner!"

Isn't the moral of the story true today? God has a work. He has commited to man. He expects that work to be finished soon. He has given us the light of the gospel to share with others. The nearer we draw together, the closer our little lights come together, the brighter the light will be. Soon we will reach the perfect day. When Jesus, the Light of the world, will come together the redeemed.

To bear responsibility God has given us - we must draw near Him. "The closer a man comes to his Lord, the more time and effort he gives' to gaining a knowledge of God through prayerful Bible Study, and the brighter shines the light. It is not only the light shining upon the Christian that increases. The reflected light that shines out from the just man is also magnified in the same measure. The darkness of the last days will accentuate the growth of this radiance. Translation will bring the outward experience into harmony with inner brightness of the sinless saints." S.A. Biblew Commentary on Prov. 4:18.

When Jesus told the story of the ten virgins He stressed the need of keeping oil in the lamps. As we walk in the path of the just we must check our oil supply daily. The Spirit waits to fill us.

We are always happy and consider it an honor to have visitors with us in our Sabbath School and Worship Services. We always welcome each visitor and invite them to come back again real soon.

Former Spring Creek Church Pastor Honored

The Rev. R. P. Welch was honored on July 8 as a crowd of approximately 400 came to Spring Creek Baptist Church at Darlington Heights to surprise the former pastor with a "This Is Your Life" program. Welch came to Spring Creek in 1931 and retired in 1956.

He was born in Bedford County in September, 1888, the son of the late Clifton B. and Sarah Toms Welch. He grew up on a farm. It was at that point in the program that a sister, Mrs. Elmo Johnson, of Bedford and a brother, Frank Welch, of Waverly spoke of childhood days.

Relatives from Alabama and Kentucky came to celebrate and tell incidents of the past. Letters from those unable to attend were read. There were representatives from Broadway, Black Creek, Sedley, Salem, Bethpeor, Mt. Tirzah, Sharon, Eureka, Hebron, Pisgah, Drakes Branch and Pamplin churches.

State police A. J. Craft and James Rosser, a neighbor, spoke of an incident when Welch was robbed and shot and how they found him and rushed him to the hospital, saving his life.

In the pulpit with Mr. and Mrs. Welch were his children, Mrs. Clarence Welch, Mrs. H. E. Carwile Jr., Ewart Welch, Gene Welch of North Carolina and the Rev. Carroll Welch of Vinton.

A plaque was presented at the conclusion of the program by the Rev. Clyde Sears, the current pastor who was master of ceremonies, assisted by Mrs. Clinton Childress and James Whitehead.

Fidelity Offers New Rate

LYNCHBURG, July 19 - Fidelity National Bank has announced that beginning Monday, July 23rd, it will offer a Variable Rate Certificate of Deposit which will pay 9% interest.

The variable rate affords a large degree of flexibility, since the rate may go up or down, depending on the current market. However, the rate is guaranteed to always remain ½% above Fidelity's best current posted retail savings rate. For example, the variable rate certificate now pays 9%, which is 1½ over Fidelity's current 7½% four year certificate. If, for some reason, the bank stopped issuing these 7½% certificates, the rate on the variable certificate could drop to 7%, since this would be ½% above the bank's then highest rate of 6½% on certificates. On the other hand, if the savings interest rates went up, the variable certificate rate would rise according to market conditions.

The rates are subject to change on a calender quarterly basis of October 1, January 1, April 1, and July 1, and may be changed only at these times.

The variable certificate has a minimum five year maturity and is not automatically renewable. It is payable quarterly with no compounding effect, and the interest accured on a 90-day basis is paid by check or deposited to a checking or passbook savings account. Interest is not added back to the certificate and cannot be attached to the principal for yield.

REVCO EVERY DAY IS SAVINGS DAY AT REVCO

It was parent visitation day at Appomattox Primary School on Thursday of last week when parents of students attending the Title I Summer Program were invited to visit classrooms to observe the students in classroom situations.

After visiting the classrooms, parents met in the school cafeteria with Mrs. Barbara Waddell, Director of the Summer Program, and with Mrs. Jean Hesson, General Supervisor, Appomattox County Public Schools, to discuss the objectives for the summer program. After the discussion they were joined by the students for a juice break.

Summer School Program Ended

Fiscal year 1973 was the eighth year in which federal funds have been provided to Appomattox County schools to meet the special needs of individuals.

The Summer School Project, which ended Tuesday, July 24th, at the Appomattox Primary School, was one phase of the total Title I program in the county.

The pre-school program was primarily one of orientation. It was structured so as to provide physical, social, aesthetic, and academic facets which will enable the beginning first grade student to have a more successful entry into school.

At the end of the Title I Summer Program, the 124 students enrolled in the program had adjusted well to the school experiences and teachers who planned many enjoyable activities for their students.

Teachers skillfully planned activities that helped the children become more independent in caring for their own needs at school. As students learned to share materials and take part in group activities they became better adjusted to group situations that exist as a part of every school day.

Teachers utilized both interclass and intraclass grouping patterns as they provided for individualization of pre-reading and math skills. Many materials had been selected and placed in classrooms especially for the Summer Program.

Field trips provided first hand experiences for the children through visits to banks, post office, farm, airport and dairy.

Teachers working in the program for the 1973 Title I Summer School were Mrs. Henrietta Johnson, Mrs Julia Rahim, Mrs. Dollye Forest, Mrs Carolyn Coleman, Mrs. Sara Morris and Mrs. Calvert Poole.

The program was directed by Mrs. Barbara Waddell, Principal at Pamplin Elementary School.

Eye Safety On The Farm

Farmers can reduce and possibly eliminate the 7,500 farm work-related eye injuries that occur each year by putting eye safety first, says the Virginia Optometric Association.

In a statement issued during National Farm Safety Week, July 25-31, Dr. Charles E. Johnston, President of the optometric organization pointed out that good eye safety equipment is available to protect a farmer's vision from needless permanent or temporary damage.

"The human eye is tough and has a certain degree of natural protection," Dr. Johnston said. "However, natural protection is usually not sufficient against most environmental hazards."

Farmers need additional protection when handling agricultural chemicals, operating machinery, welding, repairing buildings, hammering and tree trimming, working in orchards, blasting, or performing any other job with danger of flying pieces or particles.

Various types of lenses and frames are used in safety eye wear and the choice depends on the job hazards involved; the type of job or activity; the farmer's vision abilities; his vision limitations; the type of lens prescription, if any, needed to provide clear, efficient, comfortable vision; and the advice of the vision care specialist.

To protect the eyes from splashing chemicals, dust and flying objects, there are three major types of impact-resistant lenses--heat or chemically-treated glass lenses and plastic lenses.

As of January 31, 1972, the U. S. Food and Drug Administration has required that most eyeglass lenses be impact-resistant. Heat-treating and chemically-treating processes are used to strengthen glass lenses to meet FDA requirements.

Dr. Johnston stressed that the FDA-required lenses can break and do not provide adequate protection for the farmer in his working environment. Heat- and chemically-treated glass lenses meeting industrial safety lens standards should be considered essential for the working farmer.

Plastic lenses have a greater impact-resistance than heat- treated glass lenses but they do scratch more easily than glass and require extra care in handling and cleaning.As with glass lenses, they can break under sufficient stress.

Special absorptive or filter lenses are a must for the farmer doing arc welding, the optometrist said. Quality sunglasses protect the farmer's eyes from the sun's harmful rays.

Every farmer can obtain the proper eye protection equipment to meet his specific needs from a professional vision care specialist, Dr. Johnston said. Optometrists, located in 6,237 communities and in 73.5 percent of the counties in the United States, are easily accessible to farmers and others in rural communities.

Dr. Johnston added that modern farming has come a long way from horse-and-plow days and that today's farmer needs sophisticated safety equipment to protect his eyes from today's environment.

What this country needs -- is fewer needs.
